LEON CZOLGOSZ, ASSASSIN.

The name of Leon Czolgosz, the assassin of President McKinley, is best pronounced by the uninitiated by recollecting how the Russian always introduces a "t" into the pronunciation of the name of the czar. Thus the Russian says "t-zar". In the case of Czolgosz one should say "Techal-gotch," with the "!" faintly sounded and the second "t" quite full. The average American, however, will get it as "Shawigotch," and that is about as correct as he can make it. The assassin has lived in Detroit, other parts of Michigan, Cieveland and Cincinnati, and been in Chicago quite recently. He is without particular education, except in anarchistic doctrines. The picture given is the one ordered taken by Chief of Police Buil, of Buffalo, and Secretary of War Root.
